

Short summary

The 25th anniversary of the adoption of the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organised Crime (UNTOC) and its three Protocols on trafficking in persons, smuggling of migrants, and trafficking in firearms and ammunition (collectively often referred to as the 'Palermo Convention and Protocols') is fast approaching.

The Institute for Comparative Criminal Law at the University of Cologne has the pleasure of inviting interested experts, officials, researchers, representatives, students, and other interested members of the public to a two-day international conference to examine these challenges and controversies and prepare for the 25th anniversary of UNTOC and its Protocols.

The conference will be held in English language only. Chatham House Rule applies.

Hosts:

Prof. Dr. Bettina Weißer
Prof. Dr. Andreas Schloenhardt

GOALS, CONCEPT, AUDIENCE

The conference seeks to critically explore the United Nations Convention against Transnational Organized Crime (UNTOC) and its three Protocols on trafficking in persons, smuggling of migrants, and trafficking in firearms and ammunition. Separate panels examine each instrument as well as future developments. Most panels comprise one speaker reflecting on the evolution and experiences of the instrument thus far, followed by a further speaker examining future progress and prospects, followed by an open discussion. A high-level keynote speech and a concluding panel reflecting on the significance of UNTOC for other crime types and the development of transnational criminal law complete the conference schedule.

The conference is aimed at and suitable for officials from national authorities, representatives of international organisations and non-governmental organisations, criminal law practitioners, academic researchers in the fields of criminal law, international law, criminology, social sciences, international relations and related fields, university students, and other experts

While it is anticipated that conference presentations and discussions will be edited for publication in a book or special issue, to enhance open discussion, Chatham House Rule applies.
